Judge Cantrill Resigns.

The resignation of Judge James E. Cantrill, of Georgetown, as Judge of the Court of Appeals from the Fifth Appellate District, was received by Governor Beckham, Tuesday morning. The Governor immediately appointed John D. Carroll, of Henry county, who has been acting as commissioner of the court, to succeed him till the election in November, when a successor to Judge Cantrill must be elected.

Judge Carroll is considered one of the best equipped lawyers in the State for the appointment as Judge of the Court of Appeals. As editor of the Kentucky Reports, Statutes and Codes, he is probably more familiar with Kentucky decisions and cognate decisions of the supreme courts of other states than any other lawyer, and from the time he first entered the practice of law, he has been of a judicial temperament. He has held a position tantamount to a Judge of the Court of Appeals for the past eighteen months, except he could not vote.

Three years ago he was a candidate in the Lexington convention against Judge Saufley and Judge Cantrill for the Democratic nomination for Judge of the Court of Appeals. After an intensely bitter fight, he was defeated by a narrow margin by Judge Cantrill and continued his law practice with the firm of Carroll & Carroll, until the new office of Commissioner of the Court of Appeals was made, to which he was appointed.

In his letter to the Governor, conveying his resignation, Judge Cantrill says:

"Had it not been for the encouragement given me by eminent physicians, the constant appeals of many and very dear friends and my hope that I might be again physically able to discharge the duties of the office and to realize my life's greatest ambition, I should have handed you this resignation long ago. "In justice to myself and the Commonwealth, I can defer the matter no longer. I have noticed with pride what has been accomplished by your appointee, the Hon. John D. Carroll, the commissioner of the court, and as I know him to be an honorable man, an indefatigable worker, strong, able and my friend, may I not venture to ask that your excellency appoint him to succeed me."

Own Your Home.

The object in organizing the Bourbon Building and Loan Association is to assist the medium and poor people to own their homes. If you need assistance to buy or build a home call on Roy Clendenin at the First National Bank and let him explain the plan of this association.

To Meet in Church.

Republicans having been denied the use of the Court house in which to hold the county convention, called to meet June 1, have finally been saved the humiliation of an open air meeting by the Hon. J. T. Hinton granting the free use of the old Christian church building at the corner of Eighth and Main streets.

Good Price For Chickens.

The Georgetown News says: "If all law-breakers could have heard Judge Stout's remarks to the convicts when he sentenced them on Saturday morning it might have been beneficial. For instance a man had a three-year sentence for stealing chickens, must give seven hundred and twenty dollars worth of hard labor with a few clothes and a little rough board, for the above. Now, he says, when you get back if you think that profitable and right you might try it again."

New Cure For Consumption.

"A physician has discovered," says the Elizabethtown News, "that riding on the cow-catcher of a locomotive for a couple of months will cure consumption." It is just as easy to die at home and be buried as a whole instead of in pieces.

Lack of Interest Shown.

Because of the failure of the Commonwealth representatives to attend court and the lack of interest shown by the relatives of the late Dr. Cox in the cases, speculation is now rife in Elliott county, as to whether the prosecution of the Hargises and Callahan for alleged conspiracy in the assassinations in Breathitt county will be pushed.

T. Brooks.

A Small Horror.

The weasel is one small horror. Astonishingly strong, apparently fearless and as persevering as an ant, when once he has settled to the track of a rabbit that particular bunny is indeed in grave peril. The rabbit seems to know it, too, and the knowledge to half paralyze him, for he seldom attempts the one saving chance—a straightaway, long sustained run at top speed. And the end of the patient, if we do but wait the hour sort of pursuit! 'Tis indeed bloody murder. The fiend within angel garb finally tolls within deadly distance. There is a snake-like stroke, most likely aimed at the big vein near the butt of the rabbit's ear. Once there, the brute sticks leechlike to the blood sucking, while the trembling, wailing rabbit totters aimlessly about till its drained body falls limply to pay its tax to mother earth—Edwin Sandys in Outing Magazine.

Daniel O'Connell.

After a dinner at Lord Dungarvan's, Lady Morgan writes in her diary, I met the redoubtable Dan O'Connell. Dan is not brilliant in private life, not even agreeable. He is mild, silent, unassuming, apparently absorbed and an utter stranger to the give and take charm of good society. I said so to Lord Clarendon, who replied: "If you knew how I found him this morning! His hall, the very steps of his door, crowded with his clientele. He had a word or a written order for each, then hurried off to the law courts, thence to the Improvement society and was the guest here today. Two hours before he was making that clever but violent speech to Mr. la Tonche, and now no wonder that he looks like an extinct volcano."

The Best Guaranty of Merit Is Open Publicity.

Every bottle of Dr. Pierce's world-famed medicines leaving the great laboratory at Buffalo, N. Y., has printed upon its wrapper all the ingredients entering into its composition. This fact alone identifies Dr. Pierce's Family Medicines in a class all by themselves. They cannot be classed with patent or secret medicines because they are neither. This is why so many unprejudiced physicians prescribe them and recommend them to their patients. They know what they are composed of, and that the ingredients are those endorsed by the most eminent medical authorities.

The further fact that neither Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, the great stomach tonic, liver invigorator, heart regulator and blood purifier, nor his "Favorite Prescription" for weak over-worked, broken-down, nervous women, contains any alcohol, also entitles them to place all by themselves.

Many years ago Dr. Pierce discovered that chemically pure glycerine, of proper strength, is both solvent and corrective of the medicinal principles residing in our indigenous, or native, medicinal plants than is alcohol; and, furthermore, that it possesses valuable medicinal properties of its own, being denatured, nutritive, antiseptic, and a most efficient antiflament.

Neither of the above medicines contains alcohol, or any harmful, habit-forming drug, as will be seen from a glance at the formula printed on each bottle wrapper. They are safe to use and potent to cure.

Not only do physicians prescribe the above-named medicines largely, but the most intelligent people employ them—people who would think twice of the ordinary patent, or secret medicine. Every ingredient entering into the composition of Dr. Pierce's medicines is the strongest kind of an endorsement from leading medical writers of the several schools of practice. No other medicines put up for like purposes ha any such professional endorsement.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cure constipation. Constipation is the cause of many diseases. Cure the cause and you cure the disease. One "Pellet" is a gentle laxative, and two a mild cathartic. Drugists sell them, and nothing is "just as good." Easy to take as candy.

Good Idea.

First Beggar—How is it that you always manage to get something from both of those women on the ground floor of that apartment house? Second Beggar—Dead easy. I ring both bells at the same time. Both women come to the doors at the same time and each one wants to outdo the other.

—Fliegende Blatter.

There's only one remedy that can restore health to women in this exhausted, nervous condition, because it acts directly upon the nerves.

—Fliegende Blatter.

Women in an exhausted, nervous state, due to over-work, continuous social functions or a general "run down" condition of health, often wonder why tonics and emulsions fail to benefit them. The reason is plain. Tonics and emulsions are good in their place, but they cannot build up the body until the nerves have been toned and quieted.

There's only one remedy that can restore health to women in this exhausted, nervous condition, because it acts directly upon the nerves.

BETTY'S ENGAGEMENT.

By Leslie Holmes.

Copyright, 1907, by Leslie Holmes.

Betty rode in the elevator nearly every day. Allen Johnson ran the elevator every day and knew all about Betty.

In fact, he was pretty sure that any girl who got off regularly at the sixth floor and turned to the right was bound for the room whose door carried this legend:

JAMES CONVERSE.
Theatrical Agent and Producer.
General Provider of Stage Talent.
Mobs a Specialty.

Mr. Converse's office was the sort of A B C class in stage craft where ambitious young men and women were given a chance to participate in mob scenes, court balls, hunting parties, etc., at a salary ranging from 50 cents to $1 a performance.

Converse had been in the business many years, had amassed a comfortable fortune and could point with pride to the fact that many a girl or lad who had started with him in the mob scenes of a big production was now drawing a good salary as leading man or woman or was even starring.

Some one had told Betty Vincent of this fact, and so she hung on to the hope of an opening at the Converse office with the despair of a girl who finds herself compelled to earn her living without any particular preparation and who thinks the stage offers the one field where experience is not necessary.

"Take off that lace thingumbob and carry it home with you."

Day after day Betty smiled and said "Good morning" to Allen, and day after day Allen watched the roses fade in her cheeks and the circles deepen around her pretty violet eyes. He saw, too, her brave struggle to keep up appearances. One day the little fur toque she wore would be covered with ribbons, again it would blossom forth in somewhat faded violets, and another day a home curled plume would fall from its left side. Allen had been landing aspirants at the Converse office long enough to read the signs right.

Then came a morning when he took Betty, all smiles, from the sixth floor to the first. She was the sole passenger on his car, and he ran it down very slowly.

"Yes, thank you. I'm to go on in the big ballroom scene in 'The Love of a Princess'—a dollar a night, and it will be all clear because I can wear my grandmother's wedding dress. It's a lovely brocade!"

The car came to a stop, and passengers crowded in. Betty disappeared in the crush.

"Humph!" muttered Allen to himself, giving the lever a sort of unreasonable jerk. "Have to provide their own costumes. That doesn't look as if the management was rolling in money. Guess I'll look it up."

By night Allen knew all about the company and the management of "The Love of a Princess." He wanted to hunt up Betty, who he knew would come no more to the Empire building. Then he changed his mind and, instead, glared at the manager of the company, who rode at times in his car.

"Let her have her fling," he said to himself. "She's got to have it, and no talking of mine will convince her."

Nevertheless that night when Betty came out of the big hall where the rehearsals were being held, Allen was waiting for her.

She looked surprised, but he tucked her arm through his in brotherly, protecting fashion.

"You might as well get used to stage door admirers," he said, with a laugh. "Got to have 'em, you know. Anyhow, I live up your way, and it's no time of night for a girl to be out alone."

That was the beginning of his curious guardianship. When the rehearsals were transferred from the hall to the theater he was more vigilant than ever, and somehow he so ingratiated himself with the old doorkeeper that he was permitted to sit back on a pile of stage "props" and watch the rehearsals. Sometimes Betty wondered why he was so grave when they started homeward. She did not know that the worldwide Allen had ushered in this same theater for many months and knew a "frost" when he saw it, even in rehearsal. But he did not contradict her when she rattled on about the wonderful things she intended to do for her half invalid mother on that $8 a week, for "The Love of a Princess" was to have two matinees a week.

The night of the dress rehearsal Allen sat watching her with hungry eyes. Almost he wished that he had tried for the position of "walking gentleman" just to promenade the stage with that vision in soft old lavender brocade on his arm. Then his eyes snapped, and when Betty came off he whispered:

"Take off that lace thingumbob and carry it home with you."

Betty looked surprised, but she had learned to defer to his suggestions, and so, when she came out in her long, rough coat and fur toque she carried the lace bertha under her arm.

"That is what makes the dress look so pretty," she urged. "It's real lace."

"Yes, I saw that," answered Allen, "but some five cent a yard stuff will do for stage wear, and if some of them got wise to the fact you had real lace they'd cop it and pawn it. Say, you don't know anything yet about life behind the scenes."

At first Betty had felt inclined to resent Allen's espionage, but he was a good looking chap, and she soon found, especially after the first night, when she was the only one of the "extra ladies" to receive flowers—violets that must have cost several dollars—that regular attendance upon her made her the envy of many fellow players.

The papers gave the new production bad notices, but the audiences continued large, especially in the orchestra, and Betty remained hopeful.

"Paper," said Allen in disgust as he watched the audience gather on Thursday night. And he was right. The house was being filled on passes. "The Love of a Princess" was a failure.

But Betty, watching the big audiences, could not be persuaded—not until Saturday night came, when the company was called together and dismissed without salaries.

Betty was very quiet and white when she came out, her grandmother's frock under her arm.

"It's all over," she said sadly. "You were right. And—and we didn't even get one week's salary. There's all my car fare, and my new slippers, and a bill at the druggist's. Mother's cough has been so much worse!"

Allen's firm clasp closed over her trembling hand.

"There, there, don't you worry. I saw it coming before the first night even, and my brother, who's got a good thing in the Daniels Realty company, is going to put you in there to mind the switchboard. Tomorrow's Sunday, and he'll take time to show you how to run it, so when you start in Monday you won't seem green. It's eight a week to start and something better ahead, 'cause you've got a pull, see?"

"Oh, you are so kind to me! I don't see why!"

Betty was half sobbing.

Allen looked down upon her drooping head in speechless amazement. Girls certainly were queer things, he argued. Hadn't he shown her plainly enough? He cleared his throat, but his voice remained husky.

"Don't you know—ain't you seen—that I loved you—loved you from the first day you came into my car? But I wasn't going to tell you just yet—not until I got a better job. The first of the year I'm going into the advertising line with that firm on the tenth floor, and then—Say, have you seen those model flats up on West Eighty-seventh street? I think that sunlight from the south court would be grand for your mother, and if you get an advance and the advertising business pails out we might!"

Goodness, was she never going to stop crying? Was this the way girls always behaved when men proposed to them?

Suddenly the brocaded dress fell at his very feet, and before he could pick it up Betty's two hands clasped on his arm, and her eyes, raised to his, shone like two violets bathed with dew.

"Oh, Allen, you are perfectly grand! If the princess had had a love like yours, the show never would have closed."

And then—But never mind. Some policemen are very tactful, and the one who was strolling their way turned his back and picked up the brocade dress that was rolling straight for the gutter.

"Fox Hunting" in 1700.

Two or three hundred years ago any one who said he had been "fox hunting" would have laid himself open to a misconception of which there is no longer danger in a modern November. According to the "Dictionary of the Canting Crew" (about 1700), "he has caught a fox" meant "he is very drunk," and this is what a writer meant in 1599 when he observed that "whoever loves good wine hunts the fox once a year." "Foxed" signified drunk, and to "fox" a man was to make him so. Pepys records that he "almost foxyed" Dr. Thomas Pepys with Margate ale. Was the original idea that of playing a foxy trick on a man? Or, as one passage half suggests, that of painting his nose a foxy red?—London Chronicle.

A Plea For Poetry.

If poetry be a relic of barbarism and science the highest expression of human thought, let us by all means remain barbarians to the extent at least of being emotionally moved occasionally. Let us hope that the time is far distant when man will become merely a cold, calculating, scientific machine so admirably constructed that emotionalism, love, human sympathy and similar relics of barbarism will have no place in his mentality.—Milwaukee Sentinel.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

WASHINGTON, MAY 29.—The forthcoming raid into the South by Governor Johnson, of Minnesota, has aroused much interest in political circles here. Governor Johnson has accepted an invitation to visit Vicksburg at an early date and deliver an address at the unveiling of a monument to the Minnesota soldiers who fell on the battle-field there. It is understood that he will extend his visit several days and probably will make speeches at other points in the South. As he is the only Democrat ever elected governor of Minnesota and as he has a very healthy boom for the Presidential nomination in 1908, a well-defined plan to capture the Southern vote is seen in Governor Johnson's visit. Anyway, the friends of Governor Hoke Smith, of Georgia, and of William Jennings Bryan, of Nebraska, are decidedly on the anxious side.

According to a bulletin fresh from the press of the Bureau of Statistics of the Department of Commerce and Labor, the area of the United States has grown from less than one million square miles in 1800 to three-quarter millions, including Alaska and the Insular possessions, while the population in the same period has increased from five millions to very nearly one hundred millions. The report is one of the most comprehensive ever issued by the government and is sure to bring joy to the hearts of statisticians, for it has something more than 700 pages, which are devoted almost exclusively to comparative tables.

President Roosevelt's determination to make a three or four days trip next fall down the Mississippi river, unless something at that time develops to prevent, has caused general satisfaction. His letter accepting the invitation of the governors of sixteen States is regarded as an especially strong one, for he lays great stress on the fact that the benefits of development will be felt by States far removed from the Father of Waters and that the whole nation will benefit by the direct saving that ultimately will be effected by the reduction of transportation on tolls. In his letter he says:

"The basin of the Mississippi, taken as a whole, from the Gulf to the Great Lakes, from the Alleghanies to the Rockies, constitutes the greatest agricultural empire that men have ever cultivated and an equally great system of water highways is needed to supply any inadequacy of land carriage for the products of this region." The President will make his voyage of inspection early in October and will accompany the members of the Inland Waterways Commission from some point in middle Illinois or Ohio to Memphis. The commission at the present time is just completing a trip down the Mississippi from St. Louis to New Orleans. It is being piloted by Congressman Joseph E. Ransdell, of Louisiana, who, in addition to being a member of the House committee on rivers and harbors, is president of the National Rivers & Harbors Congress. This organization has been engaged for half a decade in impressing upon the Government and the people of the United States the urgent necessity for adopting a strong Federal policy of waterways betterment. It will continue its advocacy of this question and its officers feel that the present interest being taken in the subject increases its responsibility, for if the interest is not sustained the work now under way and projected will suffer. To that end its secretary, Capt. J. F. Ellison, of Cincinnati, O., is putting forth extra efforts to build up the organization, which already is powerful and counts its members in every State and territory in the Union.

"He walked right in,
Then turned around
And walked right out again."

This excerpt from a popular song sets forth the action of the Hon. William Eaton Chandler, one time Senator from New Hampshire. It was just a year ago that former Senator Chandler became an unwilling member of President Roosevelt's "Liar's Legion," through his efforts to act as peacemaker between the President and Senators Tillman and Bailey in the ratification question. He has not been near the White House since until this week, when in an absent-minded mood he was steering for the Executive offices. When he had his hand on the door a number of newspaper men, who had been petrified with astonishment at seeing Mr. Chandler taking such an unusual course, hailed him. The former Senator came to with a start, observed his surroundings and, turned on his heel, headed for the State, War and Navy building where he had business. He was visibly embarrassed. Despite the coolness, however, between Mr. Chandler and the White House he has been reappointed chairman of the Spanish Treaty Claims Commission for another period of six months.

Award Record Verdict.

A jury in Judge Shaw's court at Covington brought in a verdict for $12,500 in the damage suit of Mrs. Louisa M. Marshall against the L. & N. Railway company. Mrs. Marshall sued for $25,000 for injuries allegedly sustained in a wreck that occurred at Maurice Station, Kenton county, on February 14, 1906. The case was strongly contested throughout and occupied the greater part of the week. This is the greatest amount ever awarded in Covington in a damage suit. Attorneys Myers & Howard represented Mrs. Marshall.

The junior member of this law firm is Mr. Ulis Howard, who married Miss Carrie Alexander, of this city, and who has forged ahead in his profession until he is recognized as one of the most prominent young attorneys of our State.

A Heart Broken Young Husband Suicides.

A telegram that cast a gloom over this entire community was one received Wednesday evening from Waukesha, Wis., stating that Dr. James Kirkley Jameson had committed suicide in the cemetery in that city on his wife's grave, by shooting himself through the head.

Dr. Jameson was the only son of Dr. and Mrs. J. W. Jameson, of this city. He was 27 years of age and after diligent study had become a prominent veterinary surgeon, having located in Chicago, Ill., several years ago, where he had at the time of his death a large practice.

Three years ago Dr. Jameson married Miss Ethel Gibson, a lovely and attractive young lady of Waukesha, Wis., taking her to Chicago where he was practicing his profession. It was a happy marriage and the future looked bright to them, until last February, when the devoted young wife died after an operation for appendicitis. She was buried at Waukesha, where he had visited numerous times since her death to cover her grave with flowers. He had never recovered from her being taken from him and continually grieved for her. While here visiting his parents only a few days ago he remarked to a friend, "I do not believe I can ever live in Chicago again since Ethel has gone."

"Kirk" Jameson, as he was called here, was liked by a large circle of friends and we can truthfully say no more popular young man ever left Paris, and his death is mourned by all.

The heart-felt sympathy of the community goes out to the heartbroken mother and father who idolized their only son. Besides his parents he is survived by six sisters. His body will be brought to this city for burial, but we are unable to announce the funeral arrangements at this time.

Mrs. Harriet S. Ford Dead.

Mrs. Harriet Simpson Ford, wife of Mr. James E. Ford, died early yesterday morning at the residence on Third street, after an illness of a year.

Mrs. Ford was the daughter of the late Presley Simpson, who was a soldier in the war of 1812. She was born in Washington, D. C., 79 years and 2 days ago. She had made her home in Bourbon county since her marriage to Mr. Ford.

Mrs. Ford has been a consistent member of the Methodist Church since early in life. It is another instance where a lovely Christian woman has gone to reap the reward of the righteous. Besides her husband she is survived by six children, Misses Mary A., Alice M. and Lula Ford, and Messrs. C. T., Wm. M. and J. Ed. Ford.

Funeral services will be held this afternoon at the Methodist church, at 3 o'clock, conducted by the pastor, Rev. J. P. Strother.

The report of the special attorneys to the Interstate Commerce Commission recommends that the Attorney-General of the United States take action to annul contract between the Union Pacific and Rock Island railroads for the control of the Chicago and Alton railroad, which was virtually wrecked by the Harriman syndicate.

The most startling announcement in this report is "that railroad competition has been suppressed in an area equal to one third of the United States;" and "that the profits of the great railroads of the Far West are being used to buy stocks and control systems in the East, instead of building more roads for the development of the West". Yet after this exposure of the deals Harriman and other railroad magnates they are indignant that the legislatures of the states included in the "area equal to one third of the United States" should legislate to compel railroad corporations to charge reasonable rates instead of extracting vast sums from the public to buy stocks of Eastern railroads. The fact that the Attorney-General of the United States needs prodding to protect the public interests shows that the chief reliance of the plundered people must be through their own direct representatives in their state legislatures, rather than the procrastinating action of Federal officials.

Those good Democratic doctrines of State Rights and Home Rule are much more effective than all the boasted strenuousness of the present Administration. To guard those state rights from the encroachment of federal power by preserving all reserved rights not granted by the constitution to the national government, is the only way for the people to secure redress of wrongs and preserve their liberty.

Not a railroad is charging lower rates by reason of the legislation of Congress or prosecutions of the Roosevelt Administration, but the legislatures of many states have enacted laws which compel the railroads to charge reduced rates. Talk of even the strenuous type is cheap, but it takes drastic laws to control railroad corporations.

A Palpable Hit.

In an editorial entitled, "Wages Delusion," the Louisville Courier-Journal makes an interesting answer to a Republican newspaper that claimed that the cotton mill operators in North Germany get only $191.04 a year, while in America they get $304.57.

The Courier-Journal says: "It looks a little queer to see arguments for protection made on the ground that it gives our laborers $304.57 a year. There are 313 working days in a year, barring holidays with pay, so that the wage is less than a dollar a day. Now a farm laborer at $20 a month and board, gets $20 in money, and the board would, even at a low rate, bring the total up as high as that of the cotton-mill operator. It is well known that the farm laborer has no protection, and it is hard to see how the cotton-mill operator gets any benefit from it.

Laborers in many unproTECTED employments get more than a dollar. Moreover, the owners of cotton mills import laborers free from foreign countries. If the protected tariff makes prices of commodities high—and we know it does—where is there not a tariff on imported labor? That is the logic of protection to labor by a tariff, if it is to be one at all, but the fact of it is that it is not intended to make this argument in order to get labor support are the same men who import foreign labor to keep down the prices they must pay laborers at home.

They are the men who sell customers in America steel rails for $28 a ton, and sell them abroad at $20 or $22, making a big profit on an article which confessedly costs about $16. The argument that protection makes high wages is a ridiculous fallacy. They have always been higher in America than in Europe. But in Europe the highest wages are paid in free-trade England, and countries where they are lowest have the most rigid systems of protection.

E. F. Spears & Sons' Red Cross Flour has no equal. Try a sack and be convinced.

The World Growing Better.

A wide difference of opinion exists as to whether the world is growing better. By those who claim that it is, facts and figures are cited which seem to sustain their argument; and by those who maintain that it is not, statistics are exhibited which do, to say the least, create some doubt. But it would seem that facts, figures and statistics are not the best evidence that can be adduced; that public sentiment is a much better indication of moral standards.

An expression of public sentiment has just been made which indicates that the world is growing better. This expression is caused by the marriage of Corey, president of the Steel trust, to an actress for whom Corey divorced his wife. Corey immediately paid the penalty of his folly by relinquishing the presidency of the Steel trust, whose directors demanded his resignation. The minister who performed the ceremony resigned his pastorate, returned the marriage fee, and confessed that he had done a wrong to society generally. Even some of the dependents and servants of the steel king felt that they could not consistently retain the small presents that they had received, and returned them. Such an exhibition would not have obtained ten years ago, and the reason why it is given to-day is that public conscience has been quickened, and moral standard has been raised. The world is growing better.

Expression of public sentiment is again made in the case of E. H. Harriman, the railroad magnate, who disregarded all ethics of business, every principle of fair dealing, in acquiring the vast properties under his control. The various boards of directors on which he is serving, have made it known to him that they do not desire his re-election to them. He is persona non grata and the why, is because such methods as he employs, or at least has employed, are not regarded as comporting with present moral standards. Other illustrations might be cited, but they all point to the one fact, that measured by present standards, the world is growing better.

It may be argued that the Steel trust deposed Corey for purely business reasons; that Harriman is not wanted for similar reasons. Yet this objection detracts nothing from the argument, for such reasons would not exist unless public sentiment created them, and public sentiment must be right else it would be observed. So that even the one objection that can be made to the argument, strengthens it, and renders more conclusive the contention that the world is growing better.

Political Pick-Ups.
At least two of the confidential clerks at the White House have nervous prostration and if the Ohio and New York Republican factional fights don't take a turn for the better the President will have to take a rest. Still Mr. Roosevelt declared he is not trying to dictate who shall succeed him.

Boss Cox and the Cincinnati boodle contingent of the Republican party are all up in the air over the lightning changes in the political situation in Ohio and the wires are kept hot with sizzling messages to and from the White House by son-in-law Longworth. Let us have peace.

—0—

Those North Carolina officeholders who the Democrats charged it too great partisan activity are to be warned by the Civil Service Commission to "keep strictly out of politics." As Postmasters, assistant postmasters, collectors of internal revenue and collectors of customs are not included in the classified service, the warning would seem to be an Administration bluff.

—0—

The coal roads, known as the anthracite coal trust, seem determined to defy the law which goes into effect May 1, 1908, which prohibits railroads from carrying, in interstate commerce, any commodity other than timber, mined or produced by them. The Delaware and Hudson has just purchased coal lands costing $90,000,000 when it would seem it should be arranging to dispose of what it now owns.

In a table of all the great brood mares published, Lark, the dam of Sunland Bourbon, was the only one with six in 2:20 and eleven in 2:30 list. Think of it!

When you consider breeding, individuality and the kind of colts he gets, Sunland Bourbon's fee is lower than any stallion we know of. If you want a fine team, a good road horse, a high actor, all having speed, breed your mares to Sunland Bourbon. It is well known he gets the above kind. Sunland Bourbon made quite a reputation last year as a great road horse, and those who saw him go now know that his record is no measure of his speed.

"Bennie, The Pythian Of Syracuse And Other Titles."

“Bennie, the Pythian of Syracuse and Other Titles,” is the title of a book laid upon our table a few days ago by the author, Mr. Lewis Barnett Fretz, who is now holding the position of foreman in this office. It is a work written especially for practical people in practical life by a practical man who has given his time to the doing and observation of practical things in a practical world. In a nutshell, the author conveys to the reader through that divinest of fine arts, poetry, the thrilling story of one Bennie Hodge, and his initiation to the mysteries of the famous order of Knights of Pythias. Mr. Fretz has so skillfully interwoven the narrative with humorous, pathetic, ethical, heroic, fraternal and patriotic sentiment, that it at once takes on the vivacity of romance without the colorings of tragedy. The Other Titles in the book, which are in prose, show deep thought, and are very interesting and instructive.

It is a book that should not only be read by every Knight of Pythias, but the public in general. The book stamps Mr. Fretz as a literary genius and the volume should find a place in every library, for it is a work of real literary merit.

The Wheat Crop.

The Crop Reporting Board of the Bureau of Statistics of the Department of Agriculture, from the reports of the correspondents and agents of the Bureau, finds the area under winter wheat remaining in cultivation on May 1st to have been about 28,132,000 acres. This is 112 per cent., or about 3,533,000 acres, less than the area reported as sown last fall, and 5 per cent., or about 1,468,000 acres, less than the area of winter wheat reported as harvested last year. The average condition of the growing winter wheat crop on May 1st was 82.9, as compared with 80.9 on April 1, 1907, 90.9 on May 1, 1906, 92.5 on May 1, 1905, and 85.5, the mean of the May averages for the last ten years.
